ALNUS

Alders make well shaped conical trees of 12m(36') + in height. Quite apart from their suitability in the garden as either a well shaped specimen or a clipped windbreak, Alders have the added interest of being broad leaved, deciduous conifers. During the Winter months red catkins hang amongst clusters of small brown cones. The catkins open in Spring, green cones form during the Summer. Alders make fast growth, even finding wet soils suitable.

Cordata 'Italian Alder' 3lit C 16.00

AMELANCHIER canadensis (Snowy Mespilus)

Large shrub or small tree, 5 x 3m (15' x 10'). Clouds of small white flowers in Spring. Excellent Autumn colour and small red fruits. Any soil. Does well in moist site.

ARBUTUS unedo (Strawberry Tree) (E)

This is a special small specimen Winter flowering and fruiting tree, well worth growing. Glossy leaves and clusters of bluish white bell flowers appear simultaneously with ripening fruits which look like marzipan strawberries in December. Unusually for an ericaceous plant it tolerates chalk sites as well as other soils. Avoid frost pockets. 4 x 1.5m (12' x 5').

BERBERIS

C 7.5 lit 9.00 3lit 6-40

A very useful family of deciduous and evergreen members in a range of sizes from 0.60-5m (2' to 15'). Tolerant of all soils and conditions, even dry shade from trees. All produce small yellow or orange flowers in the Spring, and some follow with decorative fruits. All have characteristic triple thorns on their stems which need to be respected! May be used for hedging. Prune after flowering.

sargentiana (E) 3m (8') Dense broad evergreen, with leathery leaves and long barbs. Masses of perfumed spring flowers. Autumn colour Thunbergii 5' Yellow flowers. Green leaves turn fiery red with bright red berries in Autumn.

O/G 10.00 –50.00

A family of light graceful trees attaining 8m + (25'). Use for group or specimen planting. Suitable for all soils. They cast light shade themselves and so may be underplanted with groups such as Heathers, Rhododendrons and Camellia. Birch are synonymous with white bark, however seedling forms vary in this characteristic. Named varieties have been selected for their superior qualities of habit and bark colouring, A feature of Birch is their yellow gold Autumn appearance.

BUDDLEIA davidii (Butterfly Bush)

. Late Summer flowering. Lovely scented panicles in various shades. Will benefit from hard pruning in Spring to keep their shoots and flowers at appreciable height, cut to two buds of last season's growth, i.e. "stooling" to keep to 2 x 1.8m(6' x 5'). Good for dry sunny position and gives dramatic height to a border and attracts butterflies

The glossy leaves are an attractive feature all year round. These shrubs are hardy but to minimise damage to the superb flowers of Feb – April site out of reach of the morning sun. A sheltered North wall is ideal. Camellias require lime free soil and benefit from annual mulching to conserve moisture in the Summer. They associate well with Rhododendrons, Azaleas and Heathers; and make good specimen plants and hedges. They are successful in tubs, preferably watered with collected rain water. The williamsii varieties are self dead heading.
